© Crown copyright • www.metoffice.gov.uk

Wind and rain to follow cooler weekend

5 November 2010

After an unseasonably mild week with record warm nights in places, our forecasters are predicting a mainly fine but much cooler weekend in most places.

Chris Tubbs, chief forecaster at the Met Office said: “Most parts will enjoy dry and quite sunny weather over the weekend, with clear skies on Saturday night giving good conditions for fireworks displays. It will be cooler than the last few days so you should wrap up if you are out at any displays.”

However, the quieter weather is not expect to last with wet and very windy weather expected to reach the west of Britain later on Sunday. Winds reaching 65 mph in places bring a risk of disruption due to falling trees, while heavy rain could lead to some flooding.

This stormy weather is forecast to continue into next week, with strong winds and heavy rain making conditions particularly miserable in eastern areas.

Keep up to date with the latest forecast and warnings

Contact information

Met Office Press Office: +44 (0)1392 886655

E-mail: Press Office

Met Office Customer Centre: 0870 900 0100

If you’re outside the UK: +44 1392 885680